In some cases, the services are provided by different service providers, and thus a user may have to sign up for different billing arrangements and service features with multiple service providers to obtain a particular service. For example, a user may have to sign up for an enhanced services plan from one telephone company to receive discounted calling plans, and to sign up for an xDSL package from another telephone company to obtain access to the internet. In addition to the different services and providers, there are different billing plans for telecommunication services. For example, a user may subscribe to a plan that allows 100 minutes per month of access to the internet, but may only be charged for 50 minutes of usage in a month. Thus, there is a need for mechanisms to provide customised services to a user in a manner that minimises the amount of user input, for example to prevent a user from having to navigate to a website to input information manually each time they wish to receive services from a particular service provider.----- Forwarded by Susan M Scott/HOU/ECT on 02/13/2000 05:14 PM ----- Enron Capital & Trade Resources Corp.
